From king to president

Former homecoming king Chuck Valgora wins
1991 president/regent election

It doesn't get any closer than this

By PATRICK RUNGE

It's Chuck Valgora by a nose — or a vote. Valgora, a CBA student senator, won last week's student president/regent election by one vote.

Under the election rules, a candidate must receive 50 percent plus one of the total vote to win an election. If no candidate receives 50 percent plus one, a runoff election between the top two vote-getters must be conducted.

Out of the 667 votes cast, Valgora received 339 — exactly 50 percent plus one.

Mary Reynolds, speaker of the Student Senate, finished second in the election with 188 votes. Virgil Armendariz, a former director of American Multicultural Students, finished third with 126 votes.

Armendariz said he was disappointed in the voter turnout, about 4 percent of UNO's student population.

"I hope this isn't a preview of what other political intentions the students have," he said. "If they didn't vote in our election, I would hope they vote in Tuesday's election."

Reynolds declined to comment on the election.

The president/regent from each of the three NU campuses (UNO, the University of Nebraska-Lincoln and the Medical Center) sits on the NU Board of Regents. The student regents make "opinion" votes — votes that are put into the record but do not count in the final decision.

Valgora said his primary goal will be to inform the regents of student concerns.

"The students haven't had a voice at the regent level," he said. "My primary goal is to capture student opinion and relay it to the regents as best I can."

Valgora believes he will be able to work with the regents.

"I've gone to the past couple of meetings and met the regents," he said. "I believe I will be able to do an efficient job of relating to them."

"They seem like nice people. I don't think I will have a problem relating to them."

In preparation for his new post, Valgora said he will go to student senate meetings and "see what's going on."

"I want to see what will be discussed at the regents' meetings," he said. "I don't want to have anything catch me by surprise."

Valgora said the voters were the final judge of the most qualified candidate.

"Mary and Virgil were both very qualified," he said. "But by voting for me, the students said that I was the most qualified."

Valgora, whose term begins in January, gave his views on the issues that affect UNO.

● FINE ARTS BUILDING

"A lot of people have said they wanted this building, so I am 100 percent for it," Valgora said.

Valgora said the building will be a valuable addition to the campus.

"If I had a choice, I might put in dorms over the Fine Arts building," he said. "But a lot of students feel we need it, and I am glad we are getting it."

● ON-CAMPUS HOUSING

The post of president/regent will bring with it seats on many of the committees dealing with on-campus housing, Valgora said.

As part of the responsibility of president/regent, Valgora said, he will also hold a seat on many of the committees dealing with on-campus housing.

"Once I get there, I'll have a better feel for what is going on," he said.

But Valgora said both he and the senate will "push hard for student housing at UNO."

Valgora added that students will not see housing in the near future.

"People need to know that there won't be any housing this year or next year," he said. "But if we could plant the seed for housing on

Another new CCLR director

By GARY PETERSON

Mike McLaurin wants to give the Council for Committee and Legislative Relations (CCLR) more than a make-over.

As the newly elected CCLR director, McLaurin said he wanted CCLR to shift its focus away from Student Government interests and return to its primary mission: lobbying the State Legislature.

"I think it's more important to represent the students than it is to represent the Student Government," he said.

At the Oct. 25 Student Senate meeting, McLaurin proposed changes to the organization, including adding a second assistant director and updating CCLR's impeachment procedures.

McLaurin said a second assistant director would enable him to designate one to oversee campus relations, while the other would supervise legislative relations. The updated impeachment procedures would align with Student Government's recent bylaw changes, he added.

"CCLR is in a reorganizing phase," said McLaurin, who anticipates the Student Senate will approve the changes at its meeting Thursday.

But the suggestion of change is nothing new to this organization.

McLaurin said he is following the former CCLR director's lead. Teresa Houser, who led the organization from May to July 1990, also proposed changes to CCLR's internal operating procedures; however, Houser quit her position before the senate had the chance to approve or deny the changes.

"I agree with 95 percent of the changes she made," McLaurin said, adding that he discussed the current changes with Houser, who agreed with his revisions.

Houser succeeded Chris McClenny as CCLR director two months after he resigned in March.

"From his perspective, he (McClenny) thought CCLR needed to have a close relationship with the student president/regent, and he didn't have that with Kelli (Sears)," McLaurin said, adding that under McClenny's leadership, CCLR lacked reliable committee chairs. "As it turned out, he had to micro-manage. CCLR got into too many things. It overtaxed him."

— DAVE BAVARESCO

McLaurin said past problems can be avoided if the new changes are implemented.

Due to Houser's emphasis on internal restructuring, CCLR has neither preformed as a lobbying unit nor published its newsletter, The Forum, since McClenny's resignation; McLaurin said the organization has been relatively dormant.

This lack of external activity adds up to $2,900 — CCLR's unspent budget. The majority of the money was allotted to finance The Forum; if it is not spent by July 1, 1991, the $2,900 will "roll over," or become part of Student Government's reserve account.

McLaurin said he plans to resurrect the Forum later this month. However, he said, CCLR funds may be used for things other than the Forum.

"CCLR has a tendency to grow at a rapid pace. I don't anticipate it (the remaining $2,900) being used for the same thing it was set aside for," he said, adding that any changes to CCLR's budget must be approved by Student Senate. "This job can get so huge, it weighs you down."

McLaurin said he plans to spend his time in office exploring student interests, so CCLR can perform its lobbying duty more effectively.

"As long as we keep it in perspective, we can be effective," he said.

Kerrey on campus

U.S. Sen. Bob Kerrey, D-Neb., spoke at UNO Monday as part of the Pacesetter Leadership Speakers Series. Kerrey's 1:30 p.m. address in the Strauss Performing Arts Center, "Rethinking Tomorrow's Challenge," focused on current national and international trends.

The series was initiated by Omaha's Pacesetter Corp., which also sponsors the Pacesetter Leadership Scholarships at UNO. 17 UNO students currently receive the scholarships, which are designed to reward and encourage college-bound students who possess strong leadership potential.

"We think this new series will give the scholarships additional visibility and will allow the student-scholars the opportunity to learn from our country's true leaders," said Ivan Gerard, vice president of human resources at Pacesetter. "We also think it's important to keep as many of our city's brightest and youngest leaders in Omaha as possible." Gerard added that he hoped the series will reward those students who possess outstanding leadership capabilities and will help to develop and enhance their leadership potential.

A native of Lincoln, Kerrey was elected governor of Nebraska in 1982. Six years later he was voted U.S. senator for Nebraska. As a Senator-elect, he secured committee assignments on the Senate Agriculture and Appropriations Committee.

Don't forget to vote

The general election is today, with voters deciding issues ranging from the 2 percent lid to governor of Nebraska.

Polls will be open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.. About 70 percent of Douglas county voters are expected to vote today, according to Joan Kendall, spokesperson of the Election Commissioner's office.

Blood drive planned

UNO's Pre-Med Club will hold a blood drive Wednesday from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the Nebraska room of the Student Center. Juice and cookies will be served.

"She is never too busy to help out"

As office supervisor for UNO's Center for Public Affairs Research, Betty Mayhew juggles a number of different tasks.

Her co-workers say that even though she deals with hundreds of details every day, Mayhew always remains pleasant and cheerful. Because of that, she has been named UNO's employee of the month for November.

In nominating Mayhew for the honor, one of her co-workers wrote, "Betty has never met a stranger. Her concern and love for people and her management skills are reasons she is an excellent office manager. She is always pleasant and cheerful while handling hundreds of details daily."

Another co-worker wrote, "Betty, in her position, must relate to and provide support services for several staff in the areas of benefits, payroll, office needs and information services."

Professors' beliefs stir controversy

(CPS) - Should a professor be allowed to state personal beliefs in class?

That question has engulfed two Tennessee universities in controversy recently.

At Memphis State University (MSU), 225 students have signed a petition for an official probe in the dismissal of criminology Professor Byron R. Johnson.

Johnson claims he was fired for using class time to tell students he is a Christian and active in a Christian faculty group.

Johnson said he will file suit because he believes his religious beliefs were the only reason he was fired.

He said no students have ever complained to him about his Christian beliefs, which he expresses on the very first day of class.

Christy Talley, one of Johnson's students who is leading the pro-Johnson petition drive, said she thinks other factors went into Johnson's firing.

"I think there's a lot of jealousy within the department, and Johnson is seen as a threat," Talley said.

She said she is pessimistic about her petition's impact.

"I just don't think we're going to hear anything from it," Talley said.

Meanwhile, Middle Tennessee State University (MTSU) students have complained that sociology Professor Donald Schneller was using class time to promote his anti-abortion views.

Schneller denied his views are necessarily anti-abortion.

"I think what we may have is a group of students who are pro-choice who would prefer I not present material in this way," he said.

Schneller, who teaches classes on marriage and family and deviant behavior, said the controversy apparently involves the pictures he shows of third-term abortions.

"I have no doubt that I present both sides of the story," he said.

MTSU officials apparently do not plan to respond to student complaints about Schneller, whom they told to keep using the same pictures.

"The administration has been very, very supportive," Schneller said.

Colleges need
'fortysomething'

If colleges are to survive in the 1990s, they must enroll a larger number of "older" students, according to a new study by the American Council of Education (ACE).

As the nation's population in general gets older, colleges will have to do a much better job recruiting Americans over 45, who currently make up less than 1 percent of the college population, the study said.

"As members of the thirtysomething generation turn fortysomething without signing up for classes in higher numbers than in the past, many colleges and universities will face the prospect of dramatically lower enrollments," ACE President Robert Atwell said.

One of the first campus Middle East demonstrations was at the University of Illinois in September.

Students resurrect anti-war movement

(CPS) - Organizers of a recent nationwide anti-war protest said they were pleased with the large turnout of college students.

Organizers said they hoped the rallies, held Oct. 20 in 16 cities across the country, would encourage other students to end their silence concerning the military buildup in the Middle East.

Unlike past conflicts in Vietnam and Central America, student reaction to the current Middle East crisis has been strangely quiet, observers said.

However, Erik Havlick of the Hampshire College Gulf Crisis Action Group, which helped organize the protest, said more students would assume the traditional college opposition to war if they knew more about the situation.

He said he started the Hampshire College Gulf Crisis Action Group to help students at his school get more information on the conflict.

"We're not getting any kind of history or background about the Middle East from the media," he said.

Havlick said he hopes students at other schools will also take a stand.

Alexandra De Montrichard, a student at Mount Holyoke who was one of about 800 protesters in Boston, said she wanted Americans to have a more objective view of the crisis.

"I think there's been a one-sided view of possibilities to end the Middle East crisis," De Montrichard said.

Michael Beneville, also a Hampshire student, was more optimistic about student activism.

"They ain't seen nothing yet."

— Michael Beneville

He predicted the student movement will increase dramatically if fighting breaks out.

"They ain't seen nothing yet," Beneville said.

There are some indications that college students are indeed becoming more politically active.

Students at the universities of Akron (Ohio), Denver, Alabama and Arizona, as well as Kansas State, American and Tufts universities held a "Free Kuwait Day" Sept. 24 demanding Iraq's withdrawal from Kuwait.

In a throwback to the 1960s, students at Harvard University held a pre-protest teach-in Oct. 19.

Candidates promise free tuition if elected

(CPS) - Much like the old-time politicians who promised voters free beer and jobs in return for their support, gubernatorial candidates in Texas and Ohio have promised citizens free college tuition if they win their November contests.

The tempting promises suggest tuition is gaining ground as a national political issue.

An Oct. 12 Gallup Organization survey found that nine in 10 Americans believe most people cannot afford to go to college without financial aid. Also, six in 10 thought most students have to rely too much on loans.

As part of his campaign platform, Texas Republican gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams proposed giving needy students who excel in high school two years of free college tuition.

Williams figured the program would cost the state $32 million and proposed paying for it by cutting the size of state government.

However, many students are skeptical.

"I don't know how he expects to have the money to do this," said Candice Driver, a University of Texas-Austin (UT) student, noting the state is already under pressure to give more help to the prison system, human services and secondary education.

"I think all it is, is talk," she continued. "It can never happen."

"It hasn't been much of a fire-starter issue," said Ross Crabtree, student government president of Texas Tech University (TTU).

He said students at TTU are more concerned about a possible restructuring of state higher education and how that might affect the funding of the various campuses.

In Ohio, Democratic gubernatorial candidate Anthony Celebrezze Jr. proposed a similar tuition program.

Celebrezze said he would refund a year's tuition to students who complete two years at any public college or trade school in the state.

The nearly $200 million needed for such a program would be available with after-inflation gains in state revenue, said campaign spokesman Mike Thomas.

"It's one of his highest priorities," Thomas said. "Higher education should be accessible for everyone who wants it."

Don't slap

Why is it some women feel that the only way to get a small child to stop fussing is to inflict pain?

Are some mothers — and I use the term purely in a figurative sense — stupid enough to think if a child cries or fusses at an inopportune time, the only way to make them stop is by punishing them with repetitive slapping?

Are some "mothers" insane enough to believe a child under the age of two has developed powers of reasoning acute enough to deduce that if they want to stop being slapped, they have to stop making noise?

I saw something on campus that angered and disturbed me as a student and a woman. As a mother, it enraged me. Thursday morning in the upstairs cafeteria, a woman kept hitting her child over and over again. The more she hit the child, the louder he would scream, and the louder he would scream, the more she kept hitting him. It didn't seem to disturb any of the people she was socializing with at the time, but it sure as hell disturbed those of us who were up there and had to witness it.

After about 45 minutes, the woman finally got up and carried her child to the rest room. Even from down the hall, the child's screaming and pitiful sobbing echoed back into the ballroom, breaking the concentration of other students who were trying to study but most likely found it too uncomfortable.

Some people would call this simply a case of parental disciplining, but I don't believe in using flowery cover-ups. If a rose is still a rose by any other name, then by the same token, abuse is still abuse, no matter how it's disguised.

To the unfeeling mother who displayed no aptitude for motherhood whatsoever with such incredible insensitivity to her child, I have two very important pieces of advice. You don't have to heed them, but the First Amendment says I can throw them at you just the same so I'm exercising that right to the fullest extent.

1. There is an excellent child care facility right here on campus run by caring people who would be more than happy to take care of that little boy, so make use of it while you visit with your friends or do whatever it is you do when you're on this campus.

2. Get some professional help. People who continually slap their children around don't ever stop unless someone stops them first. Unless preventative measures are taken, that child will grow up to hate you for the rest of his life, and if he ever lives long enough to have children of his own, he will most likely inflict the same abuse on them that you used on him because he wasn't conditioned to do anything else.

One last thing; if I ever witness something that miserable again, I now have enough courage to get off my duff and do more to prevent it than just write about it in the paper.

Train with tabloids to be a 'white-trash mama'

Sunday night, I did the usual. I went to my local convenience store and bought a bad burrito, a huge Pepsi, a pack of Camel Lights 100's and a tabloid that will remain nameless for now.

People call me crazy, disturbed, INSANE. I call it escape from reality.

Where else but in my tabloid can I experience fine articles about medical breakthroughs and deformities from around the world? Too bad they can't be documented. Time never emotionally touches you with a story about a gay chimp that falls in love with a circus dwarf.

Everyone tells me the advertisements are blatantly fraudulent, but I know better. I'm even thinking about ordering Freight Train Willy's Secret Sausage Formula. Why pay more for expensive brands when you can make your own culinary delights?

But I'll tell you the truth. The real reason I read such volumes of quality journalism is to live out a perverse fantasy of mine — to be a true white-trash mama in white-trash suburbia.

I'd love to have a reluctant beehive hairdo (or hair-don't) which waves in the wind as I stand outside my mobile home and breathe the fresh air of Lucky's Graceland Mobile Home Park. I'd dust off my lawn ornaments and proudly shake out my latch-hook sunset scene until my husband screams for more Fla-Vor-Aid and Janet Lee macaroni.

I guess I read the tabloids for training.

I'm sure some "in the know" mobile home parks have "Get Acquainted/Tornado Shelter" parties. At the party, I'd like to think I could be very pretentious and impress my neighbors with my vast knowledge about the latest Ed Anger column. I'll bet they wouldn't know he has a steel plate in his head from 'Nam!

All dreams aside, I temporarily finished reading my paper and forgot about my burrito in the oven. It turned into a frightening replica of a large prune. For all of you who care, I don't own a microwave, so at least it didn't explode.

After I salvaged my large prune and started listening to a scratchy copy of K-Tel's Wings of Sound, I turned back to the "Dear Doui" advice column.

In black-and-white was my worst nightmare: "The average Weekly World News reader is a college graduate who earns more than $50,000 a year in a white-collar profession."

I'm beyond devastated and hurt. At least I have a gift idea for the college graduate who has everything.

But what about my hopes, dreams and possible fears? Obviously, the Weekly World News is too good for me.

So much for dreams of a bathtub Mary and pink flamingos in white-trash heaven. My dreams have been smashed like Corelle against linoleum.

At least I have my string-art kits to keep me in balance. I'll have to settle for my own office and proletarian existence at a trailer park which mysteriously attracts tornados. As John Waters always says: "God hates mobile homes — that's why he sends tornados there first."

And you thought you went to college to learn to read corporate reports. I guess I'm one up on you.

GETTING TO THE POINT

Fencers use minds as well as swords

By GREG KOZOL

The medieval notion of gallant men crossing foils and dueling for the hand of a woman has been updated.

Ask UNO junior Evelyn Manhart. Today, in her second year of fencing, Manhart doesn't let men fight for her.

She fights the men herself.

"Actually, I do pretty well," said Manhart, one of two women on the 18-member UNO fencing club. "The men are very surprised. They expect a woman to be wimpy."

Manhart is not alone. Women can compete with men in fencing, according to Ian Stochl, coach of the UNO fencing club. That's because fencing involves quickness and intelligence, not brute strength, he said.

"I rather enjoy training women to beat men," Stochl said. "Women can compete. It takes eye-hand coordination, balance, speed and analytical powers."

Manhart agreed. "Power is important, but not that important."

In fact, Stochl, Manhart and other members of the club said most people don't realize how much thinking is involved in a fencing.

"It's very much misunderstood," Stochl said. "You have to have good analytical thinking."

A good fencer has to be one step ahead of the opponent, he said.

"The primary objective is to touch the opponent (with a weapon) without being touched," Stochl said. "So you have to set up a move where he can't touch you. So you are always thinking three or four moves in advance."

Steve Croshaw, a UNO sophomore and member of the club, likens fencing to chess.

"There are a lot of strategies, a lot of moves," he said. "You have to set up your opponent in advance."

But Stochl said the time factor makes that strategy even more difficult. Unlike chess, fencers cannot brood over a move for hours. They must react instantly.

Stochl said at the Olympic level, it takes less than a second to make a fencing move.

"It's not a particularly large spectator sport," Stochl said. "Unless you know what's going on, you don't see anything."

To win a fencing bout, opponents must gain a certain amount of "touches" in a certain amount of time.

Stochl said the different fencing "weapons," like the pieces on a chess set, demand different strategies.

● The foil, a flexible, flat-tipped version of the court sword, can only be touched on an opponent's torso. Only the tip can be used for a touch. Stochl said the foil is useful in training beginners.

● The epee, more rigid and heavier than the foil, can be used to hit an opponent anywhere, provide only the flat tip is used.

In most competition with epee and foil, touches are recorded through an electronic-sensing device on the weapon's tip.

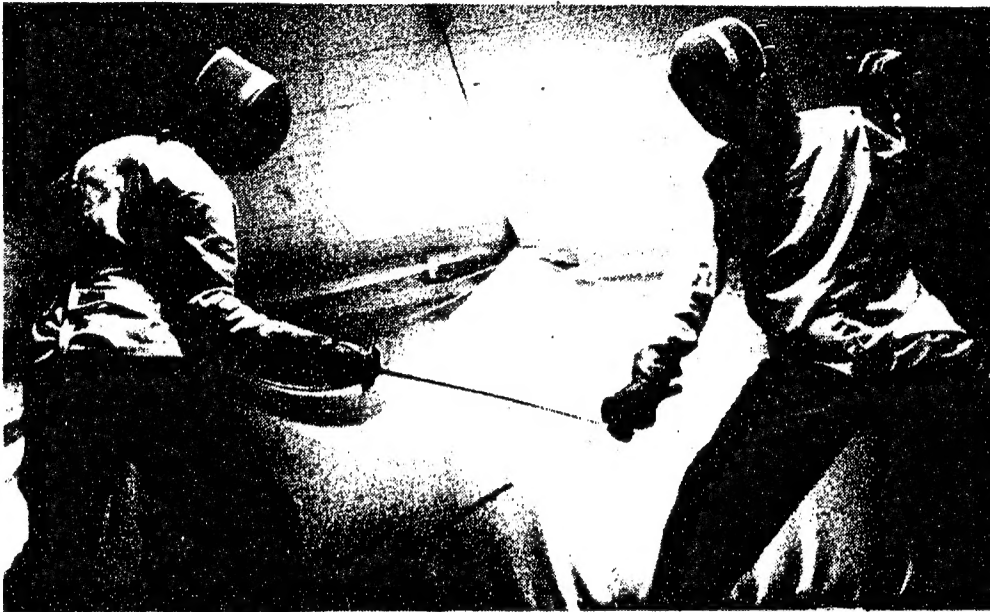

● The third weapon, the saber, can be used to touch an opponent with the tip or by slashing and cutting with the side of the blade. "You think anyone can fence with a saber," Stochl said. "They just slash. But at the higher levels, it's like ballet. It involves fast movements, running and jumping."

Touches with a saber, considered the most advanced weapon, are recorded by a judge, Stochl said.

Because the weapons have blunt tips and edges, and because fencers wear protective head gear and clothes, there are few injuries outside welts and bruises, Stochl said.

"There's some welts but no open wounds."

The UNO club will have a chance to use

Apple introduces the Macintosh Classic

Trying to stretch dollars when you're computer shopping doesn't mean you're willing to make sacrifices.

That's why you should consider the new, affordable Macintosh® Classic® computer. It has everything you need—including a monitor, keyboard, mouse, 2 megabytes of RAM, and a 40-megabyte hard disk. Just plug everything in and the Macintosh Classic is ready to run, because the system software is already installed. And, thanks to the Macintosh computer's legendary ease of use, you'll be up and running in no time.

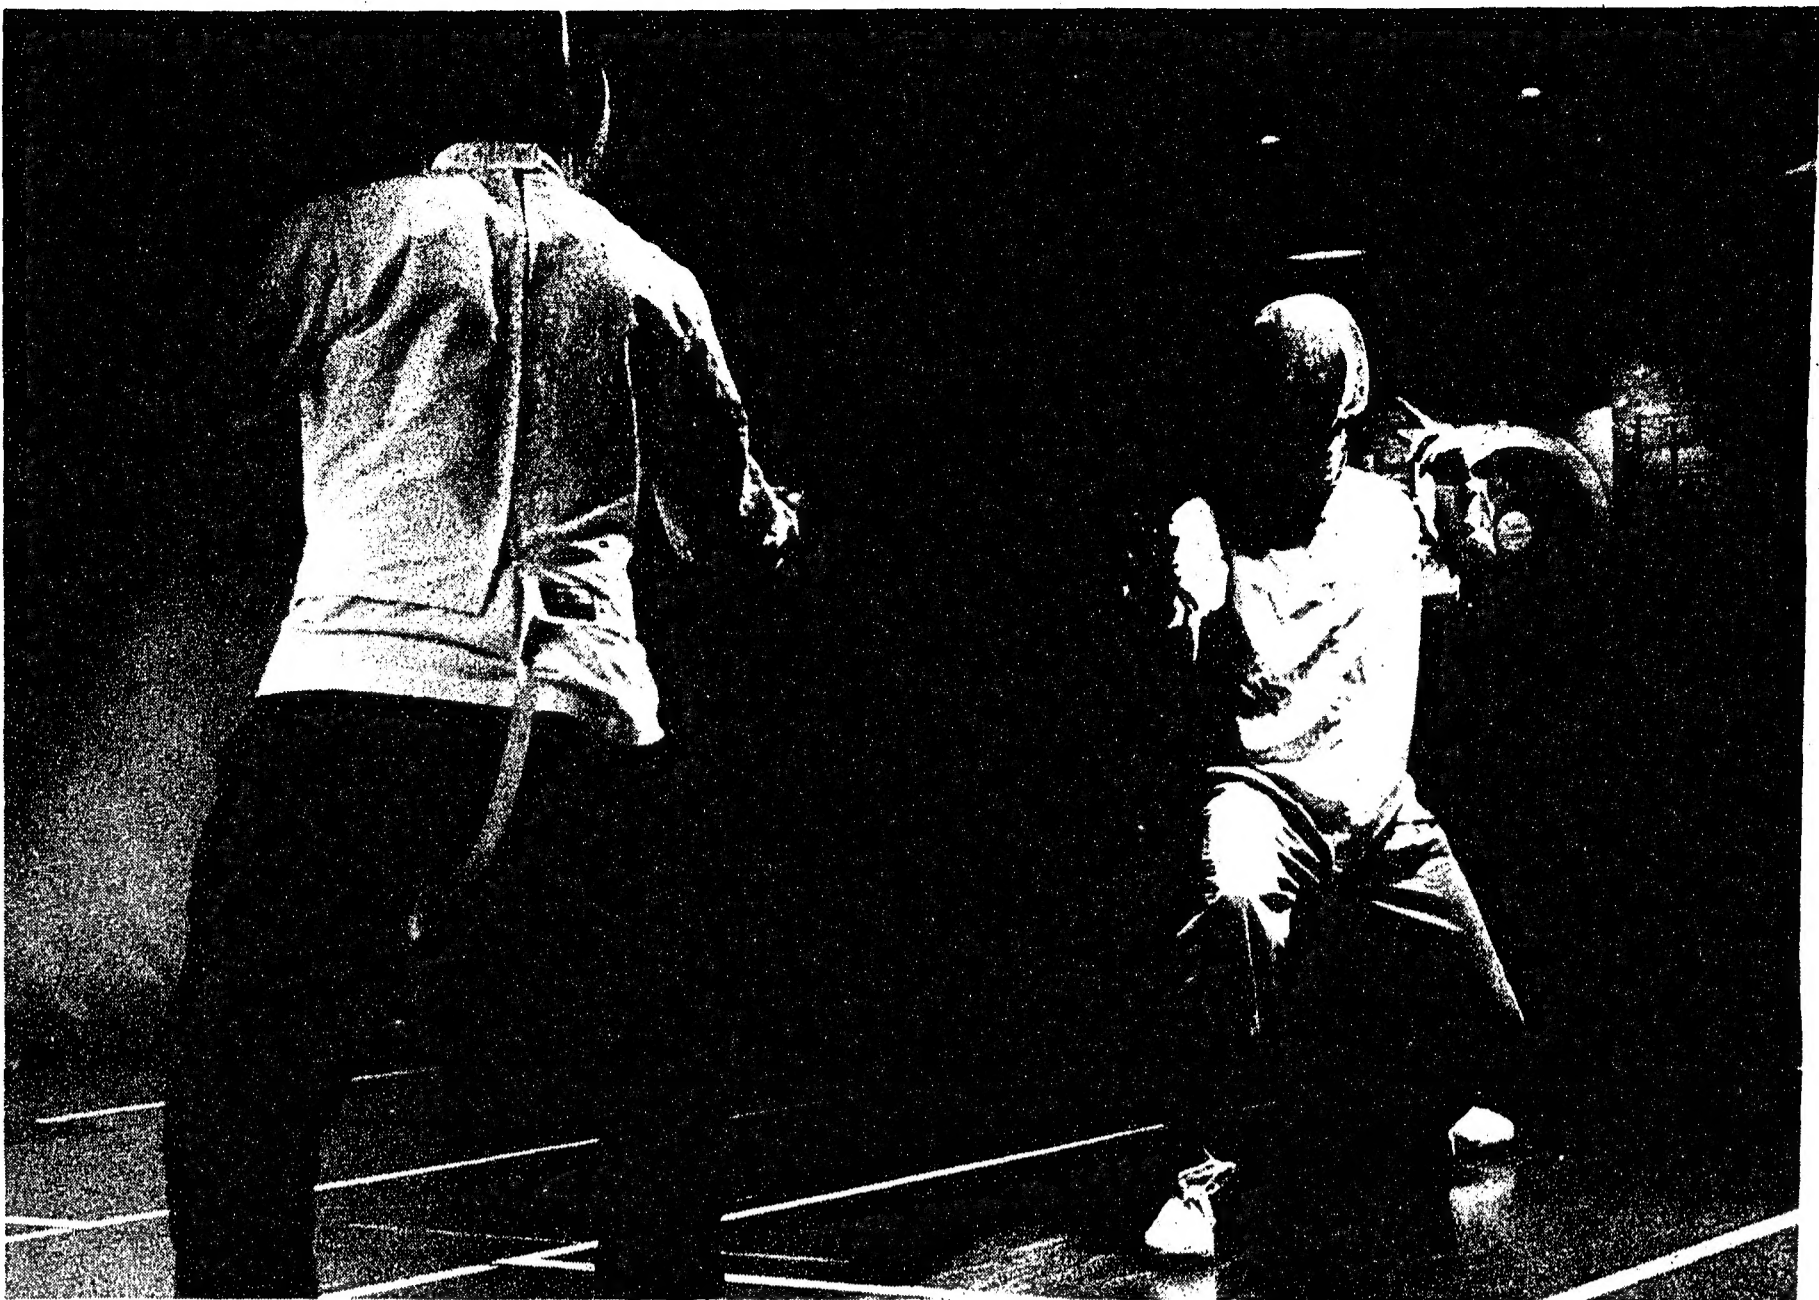

Like every Macintosh, the Classic can run thousands of available applications that all work in the same, consistent way—so once you've learned one program, you're well on your way to learning them all. And this is one cheap roommate that doesn't have trouble sharing. The Apple® SuperDrive™—standard equipment with every Macintosh—reads from and writes to Macintosh, MS-DOS, OS/2, and Apple II floppy disks, which means you can share information with someone who uses a different type of computer.

See the Macintosh Classic for yourself. It'll change your mind about cheap roommates.

President/regent-elect Valgora states his positions campus, that would be something."

● PARKING

Since UNO is a "landlocked university," Valgora said the solution is to go up.

"We need to look into higher vertical parking structures," he said.

However, Valgora stressed the need to be prudent in building a new parking structure.

"We need to look at all the projections, such as future enrollment," he said. "I don't want to spend millions of dollars on what basically would be a whim."

● CBA FACULTY

Being a business student, said Valgora, gives him personal knowledge of the problems in the CBA.

"I realize we have a shortage in both faculty and classes," he said. "It's something that needs to be discussed."

But Valgora said he did not have the solution.

"I don't know what I will, or can, do about it," he said. "But I will be lobbying for more faculty."

● STIPENDS FOR STUDENT GOVERNMENT

Valgora expressed his displeasure with the success of the measure to pay student government officers, which the voters approved last week.

"I'm disappointed," he said. "We could have spent that money on the students. Now we will be spending it on individual students."

Valgora said the final decision on stipends was the students'.

"If they (the students) want to spend their money on something I feel is foolish, that is their decision," he said.

Kelli Sears, outgoing president/regent, said she feels Valgora can do the job.

"He can do a good job if he puts his mind to it," she said. "Chuck's very personable. That's important. He can fit into any crowd."

Sears offered Valgora some advice on how to handle his new post.

"I would tell him to not always take things so seriously, to always take a 'we' attitude instead of a 'me' attitude and that you will get more done if you ignore the office politics and set your own agenda," she said.

Husker hints

How about those Huskers?

It's now that time of the football season when Nebraska Cornhusker fans peel off their red sweatshirts in disgust and start looking forward to next year.

This year's Cornhuskers proved they were a true Nebraska team by blowing yet another big game — this time to Colorado.

I wouldn't go so far as to say... I TOLD YOU SO!!!

But I'm sure the Huskers had some good excuses. In fact, I was able to conduct an exclusive survey of the Husker players to see what went wrong.

Here are the top 10 reasons Nebraska lost to Colorado:

10. The players didn't practice Friday because they were too busy reading the Gateway exchange.

9. They were frightened by regents in the stands.

8. They didn't have five downs.

7. They were preoccupied with the UNO-North Dakota State game on the radio.

6. Ralphie the Colorado Buffalo pooped in Nebraska's locker room.

5. They all drank too many Coors beers with Herbie Husker the night before.

4. They were stressed out after a difficult basket-weaving midterm test.

3. They were looking ahead to Kansas.

2. They thought it was a bowl game.

1. They were upset Chuck Valgora won.

Whatever the reason, Colorado kicked Nebraska out of contention for the national title. Tom Osborne and his red polyester pants suffered their second consecutive loss to the Buffs.

What could change Nebraska's luck and give them a national title?

A new conference.

With all the talk about conference realignment going on, the Huskers should heavily consider joining a conference with prestige, honor and tradition — a conference they could win with their fifth string.

The Big Eight has proven too tough for the Big Red once again.

How about the North Central Conference, Huskers?

Move to Division II and you're almost assured of a national championship — or your money back.

UNL can join the NCC and make mashed potatoes of North Dakota State, North Dakota and the other Division II "powerhouses."

If you're really nice, we'll even let you beat UNO.

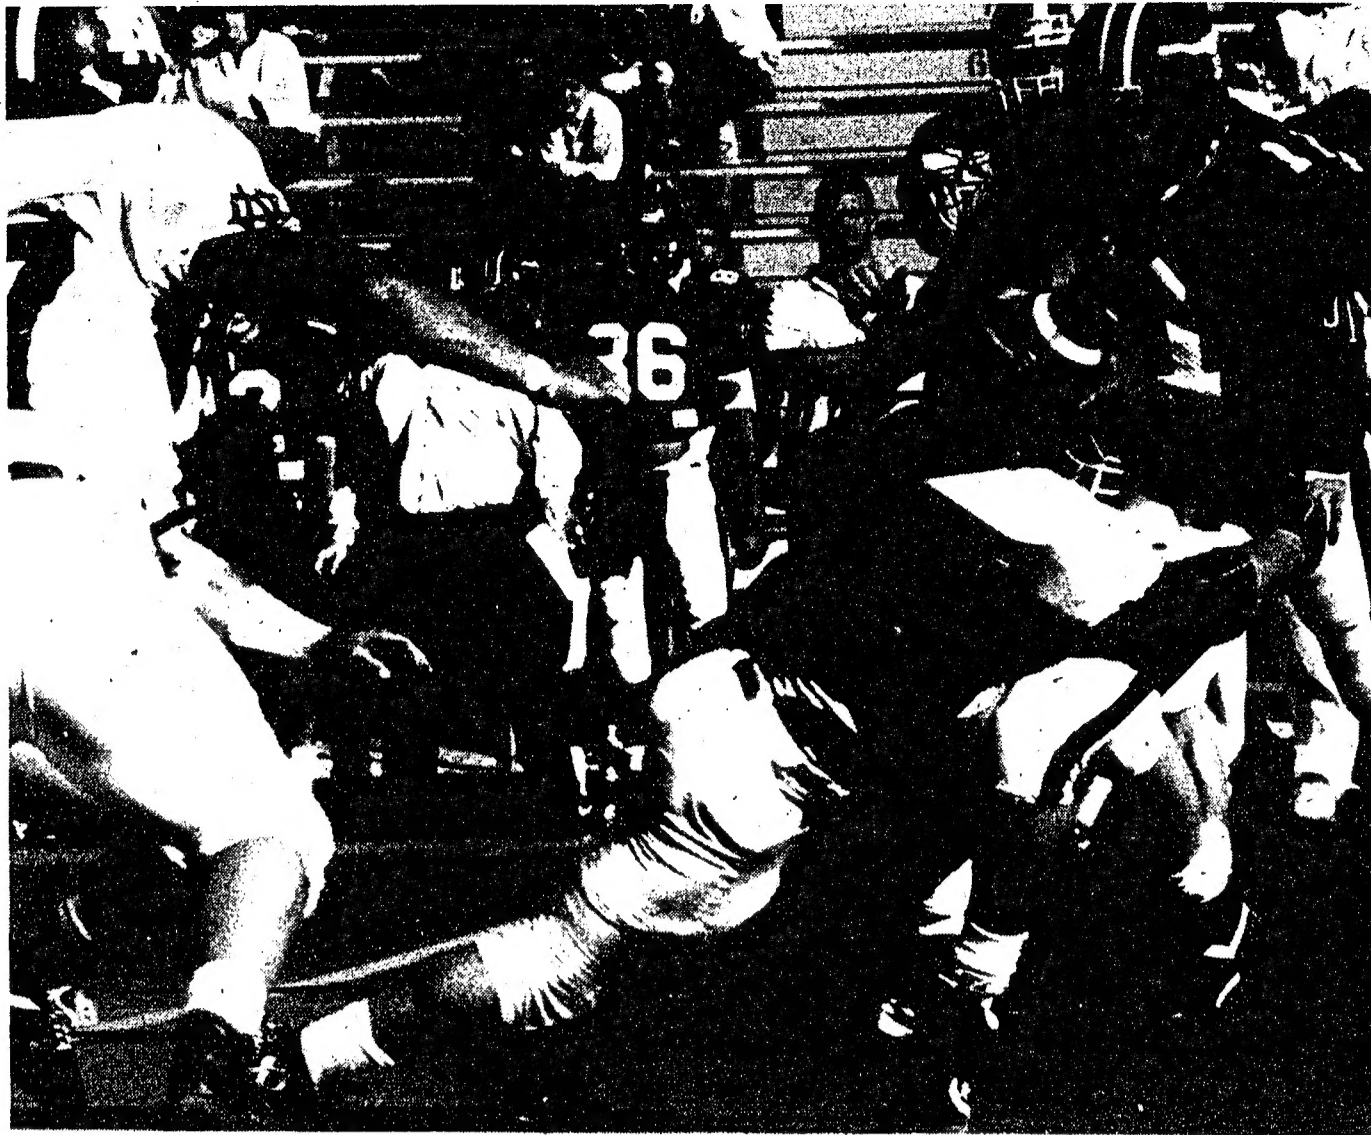

That would make for an interesting game...

"LIVE — from Omaha, Nebraska — the Nebraska Mavericks take their cross-state rival, the Nebraska Cornhuskers.

"The Mavericks are set to kick off. The ball is in the air, and the Husker return man has gone for a touchdown. Wait — there are some Maverick players down on the play. In fact, the Maverick team is down on the play. The game is forfeited by Nebraska-Omaha.

"Wow — the Mavericks lose a close one to the Huskers, 7-0. That's all from Omaha. Now back to the finals of the International Ping-Pong Tournament."

What do you say, Dr. Tom? Huskers vs. Mavericks. We're waiting...

Paul Cech, No. 11, gets thrown to the turf in an earlier game. Cech completed 7 of 21 passes against North Dakota State, for a total of 70 yards.

UNO scores first, then falls to NDSU 44-7

By Dave Dufek

Saturday, there was some bad news, some more bad news — and a little good news.

The UNO Maverick football team, tied for last place in the North Central Conference (NCC), lost to NCAA Division II top-ranked North Dakota State 44-7.

UNO's leading rusher, LaRon Henderson, was ejected from the game in the first quarter. And the loss, UNO's seventh straight, put UNO's season record at 2-8 (1-7 in the NCC).

The Mavericks remain tied with South Dakota State's Jackrabbits for last place in the conference.

And the good news?

UNO will play South Dakota State at home this Saturday for a chance to stay out of the conference cellar.

But that was the last thing on the Mavs' minds Saturday night, as UNO scored first, and led the contest 7-0.

"It was a definite confidence builder for our kids," UNO coach Tom Mueller said. "They did what they needed to do and we overcame some obstacles. We came back from a first and 25 situation."

Henderson was ejected on the Mavericks fifth offensive play of the game because of a personal foul.

"It was a very poor call," Mueller said. "He did retaliate — I don't think violently or anything. He got knocked down twice after the play. One was a real cheap shot."

Without Henderson, the Mavs scored their first — and only — touchdown of the game.

North Dakota State went on to score 44 unanswered points, including a 21-point second quarter, to sink the Mavs.

Junior running back Abel Fernandez was the Mavs' leading rusher with 46 yards. Junior fullback Roy Napora followed with 36 yards.

Fernandez also contributed a 31-yard kickoff return.

Junior quarterback Paul Cech completed 7-of-21 passes for 70 yards with no interceptions. This was the second straight contest in which a UNO quarterback has not thrown an interception.

Junior Chris Crutchfield was Cech's favorite target, catching four passes for 43 yards, including the 12-yard pass that put seven points on the board for the Mavs.

North Dakota State had 26 first downs, compared to UNO's eight.

The Bison managed to rack up 535 yards against the Mavericks, including 443 rushing yards.

In return, UNO managed only 169 total yards, including 99 yards rushing. Almost one-third of the Mavericks' final offensive statistics were exhausted in their opening touchdown drive.

The Mavs were forced to punt eight times, while North Dakota State's punter rested, punting only three times.

In the Mav's defense, Rich Lutter had 10 tackles, Mark Mattingly had 13 and Kirk Coleman added eight.

North Dakota State improved to 9-0 overall and 8-0 in the NCC.

Battle for the basement

By Dave Dufek

The UNO Mavericks are set to wind up an anticlimactic 1990 football season at home.

Unfortunately, it's not a battle for first place in the North Central Conference (NCC), but rather a contest to avoid being dubbed the worst team in the NCC.

The Mavs will face South Dakota State University (SDSU) at 1 p.m. Saturday at Al Caniglia Field.

UNO is tied with the Jackrabbits for last place in the NCC with 2-8 overall records (1-7 in the NCC).

In the past, UNO teams have not fared well against South Dakota State. The Jackrabbits have won 14 of 21 games played between the two schools. The Mavericks have won six of 21, and there has been one tie.

The last time the Mavs have beaten the Jackrabbits was in 1986, and South Dakota State has won four of the last five contests.

"They have people playing well," UNO coach Tom Mueller said. "They had an opportunity on the last play of their last game to beat Northern Colorado (third in the NCC). They're a good football team. On the last play, they had a reception in the end zone, but he (the receiver) was ruled out-of-bounds."

This will be the last game of the 1990 season for the Jackrabbits. It will also be the last game for SDSU head coach Wayne Haensel, now in his ninth season as head coach.

"There comes a time in coaching when you get too tired to tie your shoes, and the hurt of defeat lasts until the middle of the week," Haensel said. "I knew during the season that I wanted to leave with this year's seniors."

Mueller says that may be more than enough motivation for the Jackrabbits to try to win their final game.

"I'm sure they'd like to go out and make his last game enjoyable," Mueller said. "We've just got to put some points on the board against them. I think we can do it. Our kids have been playing hard."

Lady Mavs ride roller coaster

By GREG KOZOL

The UNO volleyball team found plenty of peaks and valleys in Colorado this weekend, finishing 2-3 in the Air Force Premier tournament at Colorado Springs.

UNO opened the tournament with two losses on Friday, rebounded with two wins Saturday, and closed the tournament with another defeat Friday.

"I thought we had a great day on Saturday," UNO coach Rose Shires said. "We really played well."

Led by outside hitter Amy Gradoville's 18 kill-spikes, 10 dig-saves and 6 blocks, the Lady Mavs crushed San Francisco State 15-5, 15-8, 15-17 and 15-8 Saturday.

UNO continued its winning ways later in the day with a 15-5, 15-8, 15-17, 15-8 clubbing of Grand Valley State. Junior outside hitter Karen Soukup paced the Lady Mav attack with 20 kills, while senior middle blocker Brenda Baumann added 16.

Junior setter Pam Largen had 95 set assists and 12 kills in the two wins.

UNO's wins, however, were sandwiched between losses on Friday and Saturday.

UNO opened the tournament with a 15-3, 15-8, 15-8 loss to Central Missouri State, the No. 2 team in Division II.

Later on Friday, the University of Alaska-Anchorage iced the Lady Mavs 15-10, 15-7, 11-15, 15-8. Gradoville led UNO with 15 kills and 23 saves. Soukup and Baumann had 15 kills each.

UNO lost its last game of the tournament Sunday. Western Michigan bulldozed the Lady Mavs 16-14, 15-9, 15-2.

"We ran out of steam," Shires said. "It was anti-climactic after Saturday's wins."

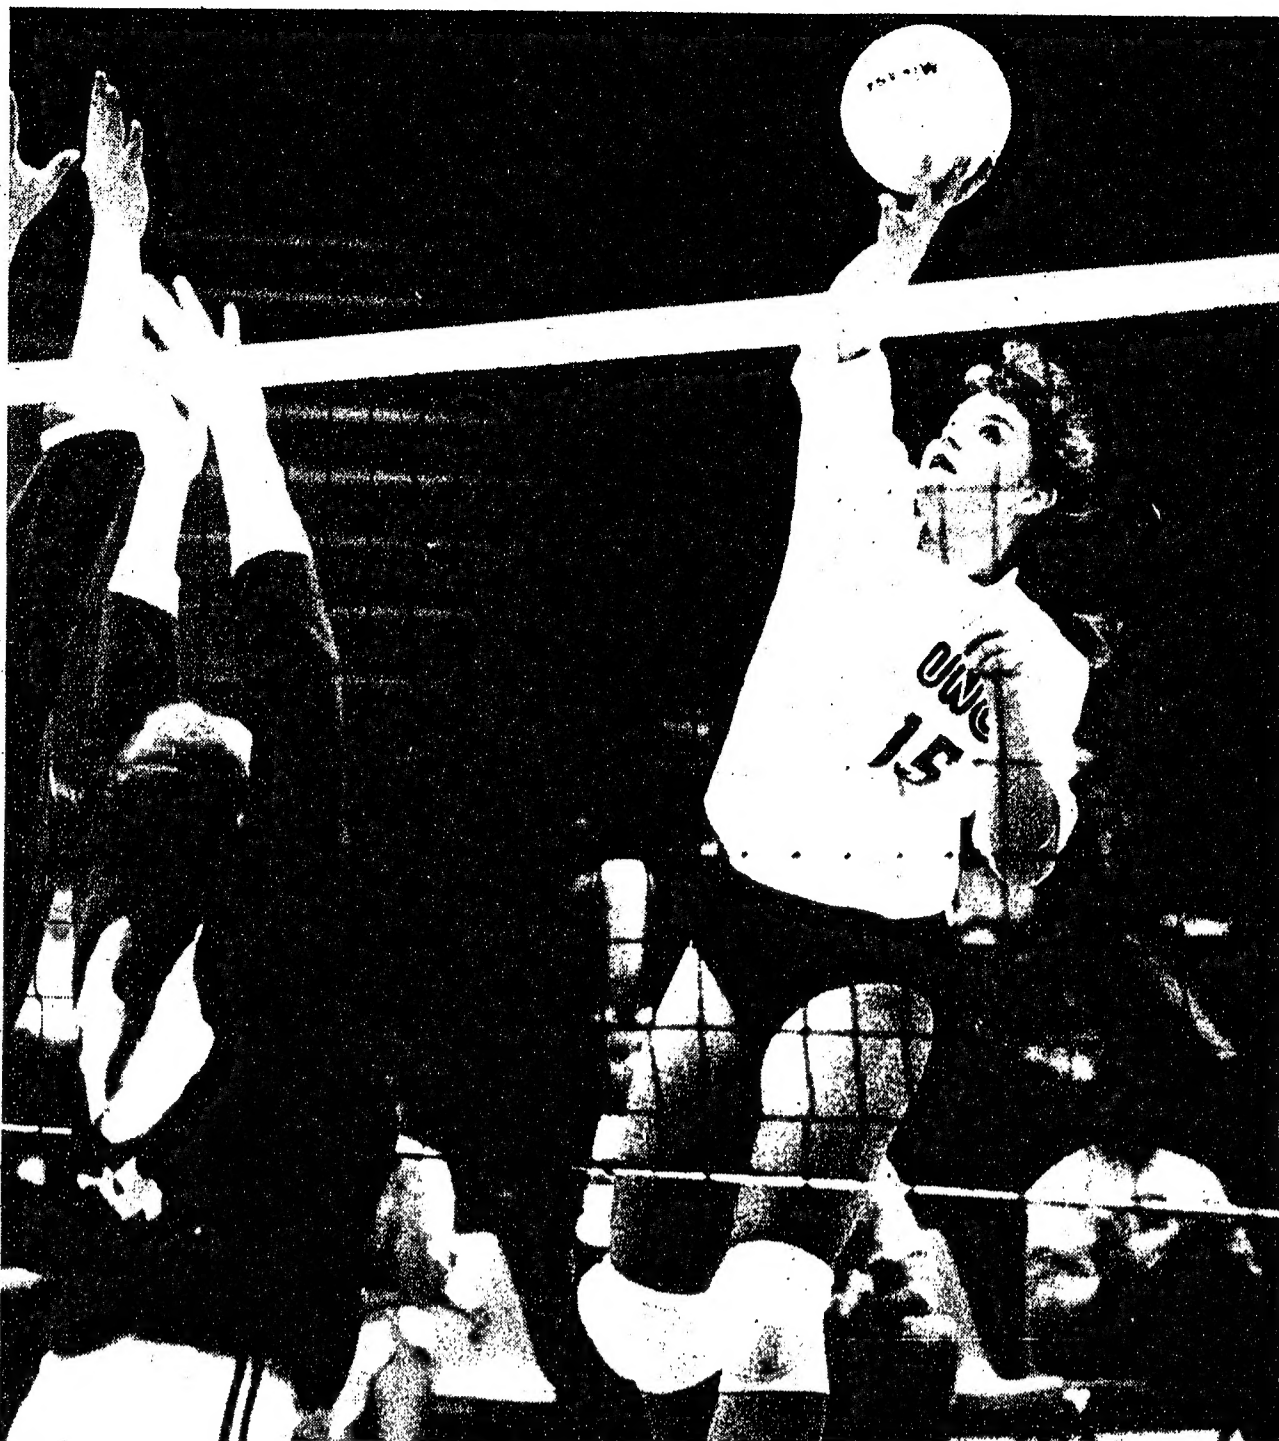

UNO finished 18th out of 24 teams in the tournament. "We felt we came to where we wanted to be. There were 17 rated teams in the tournament."

Baumann, a senior from York, Neb., recorded 54 kills in the tournament, moving her into second place on UNO's all-time list for career kills. With 1,675 kills, Baumann moved past Allie Nezum, who had 1,471. The UNO record of 1,675 was set by Kathy Knudsen in 1985.

"We should have went to Brenda more," Shires said.

UNO returns home Friday and Saturday, hosting NCC foe Morningside at 7 p.m. Friday and South Dakota at 6:30 p.m. Saturday.

"We should win both games if we play well," Shires said.

Lady Mav Melanie Marquis uncolls a spike. UNO finished 2-3 this weekend.

En garde! Fencing at UNO those weapons Saturday and Sunday at a University of Nebraska-Lincoln tournament. It will be UNO's first competition since September.

"We do pretty good for only starting last year," Stochl said.

However, fencing's popularity in the United States still doesn't compare with Europe's. Stochl said the United States Fencing Association has 10,000 members. In Europe, a similar organization has 10,000 members in Paris alone.

But despite the lower popularity, the sport has its share of rivalries and excitement in the United States.

"Everyone is friends before the bout, but once you get started, it's pretty competitive," Manhart said.

And of course, it can be most competitive in a battle between the sexes.

"Oh it is," Manhart said. "My boyfriend is in the club. We can't fence each other because we argue too much. We will try to kill each other."

Three new ways to survive college.

The Macintosh Classic

The Macintosh LC

The Macintosh IIfx

With Apple's introduction of three new Macintosh* computers, meeting the challenges of college life just got a whole lot easier. Because now, everybody can afford a Macintosh.

The Macintosh Classic is our most affordable model, yet it comes with everything you need—including a hard disk drive. The Macintosh LC combines color capabilities with affordability. And the Macintosh IIfx is perfect for students who need a computer with extra power and expandability.

No matter which Macintosh you choose, you'll have a computer that lightens your work load without giving you another tough subject to learn. Every Macintosh computer is easy to set up and even easier to master. And when you've learned one program, you're well on your way to learning them all. That's because thousands of available programs all work in the same, consistent manner. You can even share information with someone who uses a different type of computer—thanks to Apple's versatile SuperDrive™, which reads from and writes to Macintosh, MS-DOS, OS/2, and Apple® II floppy disks.

See the new Macintosh computers for yourself, and find out how surviving college just got a whole lot easier.
